Artist Statement

As an artist, I have begun to take all of my own reference photos. I took this photo that I used while standing on my porch in the middle of winter while waiting for my dog to come inside. Recently I have been focusing my body of work on capturing the beauty in everyday life. The beauty in simple things that no one else may see. The frosted leaves on my back porch are a prime example of that. Their beauty would be overlooked by most people passing by. Following my art throughout the process, from photograph to finished piece, is an incredible feeling and I would recommend every artist to try it at least once in their career. Doing this process has allowed me to grow as an artist and broaden my skills.
