Artist Statement

While exploring my house for things to take photos of, the texture of this shell caught my attention. I took photos from many different angles, trying to find the one that most clearly showed off the small details that might go unnoticed. By zooming up close, creating a shallow depth of field, and using natural light from an open window, I was able to capture an up-close picture of this shell, highlighting the intricate texture of its outer edge and the softness of its color.
